The History of George Spencer

Spencer's Steaks & Spirits in Beaver Run Resort honors George E. Spencer, a founder of Breckenridge, the man who established our post office and townsite plat, in order to ensure the future of our charming mountain town.

Breckenridge wouldn't be Breckenridge without Spencer. And, a good story wouldn't be complete without a bit of scandal and political drama.

In 1859, George E. Spencer came west at age 23 at the start of the gold rush to the area known as "Breckenridge" to make his fortune. Formerly the summer hunting grounds of the Native Ute people, the Upper Blue River Valley was then known to trappers, hunters and gold-seekers as "Breckenridge" in honor of an explorer in the Fremont party who lost his mule here in 1844.

Instead of mining gold, Spencer had the idea to set up a town plat and sell lots, and to establish a post office to increase the value of the property.

But, Felix Poznansky had already claimed the Breckenridge area as Independent. Spencer and Poznansky quickly became rivals, fighting for the claim to the area. Spencer's political connections won the day, thanks to Spencer's cunning ability to pull the right strings to secure the charter for the post office.

Spencer convinced the good folks of Breckenridge, spelled with an "e, to change the spelling to Breckinridge with an "i" to ingratiate Vice President John C. Breckinridge. They agreed and the Vice President granted the town of "Breckinridge" its post office in January 1860.

When John C. Breckinridge flipped to the Confederacy at the start of the Civil War in 1861, the townsfolk changed the name back to Breckenridge, with an "e." By then, Spencer had left town and went on to distinguish himself in service to the Union during the Civil War and was eventually elected U.S. Senator to Alabama. He died at age 56 in Washington, D.C.

Spencer's legacy lives on. Through his efforts to create a town and secure a post office, he ensured the permanence of Breckenridge. Spencer's Steaks & Spirits in Beaver Run Resort honors his important contribution and our town's history.
